

SHRP2 Education Connection

Incorporating SHRP2 Solutions into Academia

Solutions from the second Strategic Highway Research Program (SHRP2) have already been implemented in all 50 States on more than 250 projects being deployed by State Departments of Transportation, Metropolitan Planning Organizations and other agencies. SHRP2 Education Connection will help extend the value and benefits of this national investment to the next generation of transportation professionals.

This initiative is an excellent opportunity for professors and instructors to bring state-of-the-practice solutions into their classrooms, thereby empowering their students with tools to address emerging transportation issues and challenges.

The SHRP2 Education Connection initiative encourages academia to incorporate the latest transportation research, tools, processes, innovations, and technologies into lesson plans that will ensure up-and-coming transportation leaders have the tools for the road ahead.

Save Lives

Examining driver behaviors that contribute to crashes and reducing worker and traveler exposure to dangerous work zones, incident scenes, and congestion.

Save Money

Decreasing construction and maintenance costs with innovations that result in longer-lasting, more efficient project planning, and faster project delivery.

Save Time

Speeding project delivery through systematic, collaborative planning; decreasing congestion on the highway system; and making travel times more reliable.

About SHRP2

SHRP2 is a collaborative effort between the Federal Highway Administration (FHWA), the American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials (AASHTO), and the Transportation Research Board (TRB) to address critical state and local challenges, such as aging infrastructure, congestion, and safety, through a series of products called SHRP2 Solutions.
